The end of summer is when the staff and I usually are looking back and feeling a sense of pride in what transpired over the summer, a sense of relief over the things that didn’t happen, and, in the case of our Programming Team, deliriously exhausted. It is a good kind of tired, though.

Instead, the end of summer 2020 was anti-climactic, to say the least. Amelia Haslam, our camp director, describes it well in an email that she recently sent to the rest of the staff:

“This would have been our last day of summer with campers. We would be sweaty, exhausted and proud, and preparing for our closing banquet. Without hosting campers this summer, however, it feels like a part of what makes us tick is missing. It was hard to not do the work we love in the way we know how to do it. It was hard to not see those sweet faces day in and day out. And it is hard moving into the fall with as little understanding of what’s to come as we’ve felt for the last five months.”

She adds, “Even our name’s meaning has difficulty in it. It is woven into our camp, just like it is woven into humanity, and out of these difficulties can come some truly incredible things.” So true. I would add that these difficulties also can bring about some very positive changes and opportunities that might not have occurred or arisen otherwise.

Aranzazu: A spiritual place requiring a difficult path to reach.

When we cancelled our summer session to protect the health of those whom we serve, we knew that they were still going to want and need to connect with others, to learn new skills, and to stay physically active – probably more than ever. So we dove into online programming, barely knowing where to start. With the help of several board members, former camp counselors, Driscoll Children’s Hospital physicians, and other friends, we created and distributed more than 130 free, online activities and videos by summer’s end.

Equally as exciting was the fact that this endeavor clearly fulfilled a need. We had 3,549 views on our YouTube channel and a 70% increase in subscribers. An average of 400 people watched each of our Facebook videos. We had a 13% increase in the number of Instagram followers as well. It was a true team effort that probably would never have come about, and certainly not so quickly or collaboratively, if we had not urgently needed to pull a rabbit out of a hat.

As a result of another “difficult path” we were forced to take three years ago – rebuilding after Hurricane Harvey – we now are celebrating the completion of the construction of Shady Bay, our new cabin that was designed specifically for families that include a child or young adult with special needs or a chronic illness. These families often have a hard time finding a place that is fun and safe for everyone. At Camp Aranzazu, however, they now can enjoy all the traditional camping activities, and wake up every morning to a beautiful view of Copano Bay.

Like everyone, we miss the comforts, flexibility and familiarity of pre-pandemic life. However, we are seeking and seizing the possibilities that have arisen as a result of the virus and its effect our operations. We are buoyed by your continued support and interest in our mission, and hope you will participate in one or more of our upcoming events – in person or online!

I wish you and your family good health and much peace, as we all continue along this unusual and challenging journey.

Thinking about TOMORROW... TODAY

It is hard not to be reflective during turbulent times. There are many questions for which there are no sure answers. There also are a lot of questions that only we can answer, such as, “What can I do to make the world a better place? How can I show gratitude for what I have been given? Are there others besides my family on whom I would like to have a positive impact?”

As you think about your legacy, please consider the special populations whom we serve. You can have a lasting impact by making a bequest, donating appreciated securities, giving from your donor-advised fund, or making the Camp the beneficiary of an IRA or life insurance policy you no longer need.

Reach out to a trusted financial or legal advisor to assist you. You also can visit www.camparanzazu.org/support-us or email Kate at katep@camparanzazu.org for information. Those who include the camp in their will or estate plans automatically become members of our legacy society. If you have already included Camp Aranzazu in your legacy planning, please let us know so we can express our heartfelt gratitude, as well as include you in all legacy society communications and recognition.

NEW CABIN is IDEAL for FAMILY CAMPS

We recently completed the construction of Shady Bay, which replaces the two smaller cabins destroyed by Hurricane Harvey three years ago. The building’s 10 rooms face Copano Bay, giving guests a beautiful view of the water and wetlands. Shady Bay’s smaller rooms sleep four people each and are perfect for family camps, leadership groups, and church retreats.

Volunteer Spotlight

Joanne Taylor has served on Camp Aranzazu’s board since 2003. She was instrumental in helping oversee the construction associated with the Unlimited Horizons Capital Campaign in 2016 and 2017, and the rebuilding and repairs required after Hurricane Harvey. Says Camp Aranzazu’s founder, Tom Forney, “Camp Aranzazu would not be the success it is today without Joanne’s personal impact. Her fingerprints are on every building, program, and person.”

Joanne worked at PDR, a design, architecture and consulting firm in Houston, for 35 years, the last 20 of which she led the company as president. She retired in 2013 and relocated to Rockport in 2015. Keith Little, chairman of the Camp’s Board of Directors, says, “The camp has undertaken close to $13 million in construction projects over the last several years. Joanne’s presence in Rockport and her experience managing people and projects has been invaluable in making sure that these projects were completed efficiently and correctly.”

Joanne also served on the camp’s Personnel Committee for three years, providing thoughtful guidance and support. In addition to volunteering her time at Camp Aranzazu, Joanne also supports several other Rockport-area organizations, serving as president of the The Maritime Museum’s Board of Trustees since 2018. Thank you Joanne!

Rylee doesn’t MISS A BEAT

Rylee, a camper from Driscoll Children’s Hospital’s cardiology department, has been coming to camp for over three years. Says Rylee, “I feel like I’m the only person I know with a heart condition, but at camp there are other people like me. I like knowing I’m not the only one.”

With the arrival of the novel coronavirus, Rylee’s life has changed. She says, “I’m stuck inside a lot. I can’t see my friends as much, and I’m not going to school right now.” Her mom explains that Rylee is scheduled for heart surgery in a few months, so the family must be cautious to ensure she stays healthy: “We’ve kept her brothers home [from school] as well to minimize the risk of her getting sick. It’s really important she have this surgery.”

Rylee says she missed attending camp this summer because she has a lot of long-distance friends she can only see at Camp Aranzazu. Her mom says,

“We’re very grateful that Rylee can attend a week at camp that is specifically for kids with heart conditions.”

We can’t wait for the time we get to see Rylee and all of our other campers swinging from the Screamer rope swing, sailing on Copano Bay, and sitting around an evening campfire. However, until we can gather safely, we are focused on creatively offering a sense of community to our campers – wherever they may be.
